Supervisors consider comprehensive coverage

BY TRACI BONNEY

The Mississippi Association of Supervisors has recommended that the local board not refuse an offer made to it Thursday.

The state association announced by letter the formation of a Mississippi Counties Property and Liability Self Insurance Pool (MCPLSIP). The insurance offered will cover just about everything the county may own, except for boats 26 feet or larger, or boiler machinery, as well as all public officials and other county employees.

The comprehensive package will provide an initial liability limit of $500,000, with an increase to a $1 million limit (at no added cost to the county) when the pool reaches the appropriate written premium level.

Harold White, representing Sedgwick James (the service company that is handling the insurance and recruiting counties into the pool), told the board the state association wants to start the pool by July 1.

He explained that the policy being offered will cover anyone and anything the county includes in its policy — buildings, vehicles, office equipment, other property, and employees — in cases where sovereign immunity does not apply.

Sovereign immunity insulates the county from many lawsuits. However, White said, in any suit that is taken to federal district court, sovereign immunity is endangered.

Board okays contracts for county jail addition

BY TRACI BONNEY

The board of supervisors authorized the signing of contracts for the construction of an addition to the county jail Monday.

The addition, which was approved some time ago, will house minimum security inmates and make room for more Immigration and Naturalization Service inmates — mostly illegal aliens being held on various charges or for deportation.

Since the jail receives from the federal government $45 a day for each inmate, more inmates means more money for the jail budget, which is comprised entirely of funds from housing INS inmates.

The board stipulated that construction on the addition could not begin until after June 30, when funds would become available. Architect Fred Wagner submitted the contracts.

Bond attorney Lucien Bourgeois submitted to the board a resolution of intent to obtain structures for the jail expansion and to enter an agency agreement with Hancock County Public Improvement Corporation.

The nonprofit corporation, chartered earlier in the month, was formed as a financing tool to allow the county to save money on the jail addition, Bourgeois said.

Board attorney Gerald Gex told the board, "It's the least expensive way to proceed."

In an unrelated matter, Bourgeois gave the county's officials a pat on the back.

He related that during a recent trip to New York to secure the rating for a bonds being refinanced by Hancock Medical Center, officials

Shoppers and a determined cop assist in capture of purse thief

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Jane Keen of Waveland has two suggestions: one, "Shoppers, do not place your purses in the basket;" and two, "Thieves, if you are going to rip someone off, don't try it in Waveland."

Keen was victimized by a strong armed robber in front of Delchamps Grocery in the Choctaw Shopping Center Wednesday afternoon, and within minutes, total strangers came to her aid by chasing the robber until one determined law enforcement officer was able to locate the suspect.

"It was about 4:45 p.m. and I was standing next to my car in the parking lot with my basket of groceries," Keen described. "My purse was in the child's seat."

"I turned to open the rear door to place my groceries inside, when a whirlwind passed me and I saw my purse go flying."

"I immediately screamed, 'Help, help!' Then I realized I didn't want people coming to help me—but to stop him, so I started yelling, 'Stop, thief!'"

"Then I saw four or five men and boys start chasing the man with my purse toward the east side of Delchamps. Two of the men were in a truck."

"I was still standing by my car when another man pushed his basket of groceries containing a child up to me and asked me to watch his daughter as he took off running towards the rear of Delchamps."

"Next thing I knew, a young girl, came out of J's Restaurant and asked if I wanted her to call the police."

"The Waveland police arrived within just a few minutes."

Keen said she was so impressed with all the people who responded to her calls for assistance. "Everybody instinctively did the right thing. None of these people hesitated. They all jumped right in."

"Two young men, both 17-year-olds, chased the thief into the woods. The two men in the truck drove over to Longfellow Drive where they kept watch to make sure he didn't get through there. If it were not for all the people who came to my assistance, and, of course, the wonderful policemen we have, a man like that could have gotten away."

Also impressed by the civilian action and the dedication of one of his own investigators was Waveland Police Chief James Varnell.

Waveland police, as well as nearly every law enforcement officer within the near vicinity, had just returned from a Bay St. Louis arrest action where a sheriff's deputy had been stabbed.

Longtime Waveland mayor dies

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Funeral services were conducted Saturday for former Waveland Mayor John Longo Jr.

Longo, 62, died Thursday at his residence.

His tenure in Waveland politics spanned decades, beginning with his election to the board of aldermen in the 60's. He served five consecutive terms as mayor of the city until 1990.

Pharmacist Louise Lynch, owner of Lynch's Waveland Drug Store, considered Longo "a great mayor and a good friend."

Since his retirement, the former mayor enjoyed fishing off the pier and having coffee with friends at the drug store.

"Our families grew up in this little community," said Lynch. "We watched Waveland grow and prosper under his leadership."

Longo was retired from Southern Frosted Foods, a family operated business he founded in 1955. He previously served as Civil Defense director, a volunteer firefighter and sheriff's deputy. He was a veteran of the U. S. Army and the Merchant Marines.

Waveland City Attorney

John Longo Jr.

Lucien Gex described for former mayor as "totally committed to the people of Waveland. I have never known anyone more devoted to his community than he was."

Gex worked with Longo for 26 years, dating back to the former mayor's tenure as Ward One alderman. "He was a good Christian man, a family man. When we were away on city business, he couldn't wait to get back to Waveland."

Longtime friend and Waveland Alderman Bob Hubbard reflected on the eight years he served with Mayor Longo; "You could say he was like a mentor

Ladder of success

Tisdale: Superintendent's job to help administrators do well

BY TRACI BONNEY

While he isn't entering his first year in office with a set plan at this point, Paul Tisdale does have some clear ideas about how he and his employees should do their jobs.

Tisdale, 39, is the newly hired as superintendent of the Bay St. Louis-Waveland school district. Currently the assistant principal of Biloxi High School, he starts July 1 and succeeds Robert Magee, who is retiring after more than 20 years of teaching and administrative work and three years as superintendent.

Tisdale said, "I have no plan of action per se. I'm sitting down at my MacIntosh right now, trying to determine how to set the tone I want for the year."

"I think it's important to send clear signals to the people with whom you work. Communication is important. If you tell eight people something at the same time, they're still going to hear eight different things, so I think it's vital that you establish solid communications."

Tisdale said he has a vision for what he thinks the school district ought to accomplish, and that he considers the relationships between teachers and students to be of prime importance.

"A teacher's job is to help the student be a success. In the same manner, the principal's job is to help the teacher succeed, and my job is to help the principals be successful in their positions."

A key rung in this ladder of success is effectiveness, he commented.

"I am confident the county will get a good rating on the hospital bond refinancing. Your people represented Hancock County well during the meetings with the bond company," he told the supervisors.

The board also approved two reappointments and one hiring. Jewel L. Prince was approved for another five-year term as a Leetown Volunteer Fire District commissioner; and Emile Buccola was reappointed as a commissioner in the Hancock County Wastewater Management District.

The board took under advisement two proposals. One was for a recreation area/playground across Lakeshore Road from Gulfview Elementary; the other, a bid for a Ford pickup truck to be used by the county animal warden. In the absence of Port and Harbor Commission executive director Harold "Buz" Olsen, Gex presented the supervisors with four commission dockets: industrial park revenue, railroad car wash, terminal, and t-hanger facility. The board approved all four for payment.

Approval was given for: county personnel to attend two conferences and two training courses; the purchases of hoses and a turbo jet nozzle for Leetown Fire Department, and for radios for the West Hancock Fire Department; advertisement of two separate bids to paint the interior and exterior of the courthouse; and the payroll.

The board recessed to June 30 at 9 a.m.

Beautification Committee seeks more county volunteers

If you want to make a difference in Hancock County, the Hancock Chamber of Commerce Beautification Committee needs you.

you're tired of littered roadsides, illegal dumping and weedy, abandoned building sites, you may want to consider joining the committee.

Those interested are invited to attend the committee's next meeting, June 25, 10 a.m., at the Human Resources auditorium.

You can help in other ways, too. If you see someone litter or throw litter from a vehicle, note the tag number of the automobile and call the hotline to report it. The Bay St. Louis number is 255-6234 and the Sheriff's number is 255-6246. It is not necessary to identify yourself when calling in.

You can also adopt your street or road. Volunteers to help coordinate this for the different areas of the county may contact the chamber office for more information (467-9048).

The committee is very active and effective in dealing with community appearance issues, and can use the assistance of any residents willing to help. If

John Longo Jr.

The death of John Longo Jr., ex-mayor of the City of Waveland, is the final chapter in the life of a person who led his city through its greatest growth.

When Longo was elected mayor of Waveland, it was a sleepy city just biding its time and remaining still.

A five-time mayor and three-time alderman, Longo gave his all to bring Waveland, his beloved city, into the 21st century.

One of his greatest achievements has to have been the development and construction of the Waveland Regional Wastewater Management District.

While other governmental leaders were reporting there were no federal monies around for grants, Longo did not fall asleep like most did. He kept charging ahead, finding funds for the worthwhile project.

Under Longo's leadership, Waveland expanded by annexation, enticed new businesses and helped develop new shopping centers. This paid off in tremendous increases in the city's share of sales taxes.

City services were expanded and Waveland's residents did not see the big tax increases as other municipalities in the area had.

Longo felt a city should be run like a business, and he did just that, leaving office with the city in good financial shape.

Under Longo's leadership, Waveland did things as they went along, maybe not on a large scale compared to other cities, but small improvements were made day by day.

He was a successful businessman, retiring several years ago from Southern Frosted Foods, a company founded by him in the mid-50's and now operated by family members.

Longo gave to his church and its school with his time, talent and resources. Many hours of his personal time were spent helping with fund-raisers, especially with the chairmanship of his church's annual seafood dinner.

He liked to fish and could be seen on local piers many mornings at the break of dawn.

His wife, sons, daughters and grandchildren can all be proud that their husband, father and grandfather was the person responsible for Waveland's 'waking up,' and moving toward the future.

Benefits of his leadership abilities will be reaped for many years to come and on into the next century.

To his wife, Jean; sons John, Steve and Theodore; daughters, Gail, Deborah and Christine; grandchildren and many friends, you can be assured that John Longo Jr. will be remembered as being one the 'greatest men' of Waveland, Mississippi in this century.

IN CONGRESS

By Rep. Gene Taylor

America must balance its budget

As an original co-sponsor of the balanced budget amendment, I was very disappointed that the House voted on June 11 to reject a proposal that would have reduced our nation's deficit spending.

The amendment, sponsored by a majority of House members and endorsed by the President, failed to achieve the two-thirds vote necessary to adopt a constitutional amendment.

I firmly believe that had this amendment been adopted, we could have capped our nation's rising debt. It is mind boggling to imagine that our nation is $3.8 trillion in debt and this year's deficit will climb to a record $400 billion.

The national debt represents 14 percent of the budget and is the fastest growing segment of our allocated expenditures. It disturbs me that our nation spends $500 million a day and not one penny of this deficit spending goes toward finding a cure for cancer, paying one inch of Mississippi highway or educating one child.

The horrible debt is by far the greatest threat to our nation's security. The interest alone is literally bleeding our country to

A meeting of the Beautification Committee of the Hancock Chamber of Commerce will be at 10 a.m. Thursday, June 25 at the meeting room of the Human Services Complex on Longfellow.

The meeting room is located next to the Mississippi Employment Service's office.

The help of all citizens is needed in order for the Beautification Committee to meet the Litter Free by '93 campaign goal.

There are many of us already involved in the county's cleanup, yet many more are needed.

A person's contribution could be as little as one-half hour a month, or as much time as he or she would like to contribute to a very important venture.

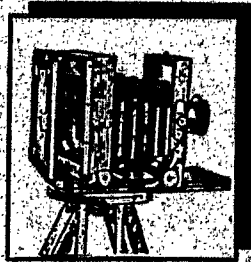

There are so many ways in which a persons can help in cleaning up our community, such as adopting a street or road, bringing the message of Litter Free by '93 in person to businesses and neighborhood residents, help in community-wide cleanup days, cut the grass in the ditch and sidewalk in front of their property, changing the habit of not flicking cigarette butts out the window of a vehicle, or most important, not emptying ash trays in parking lots or at intersections. Beautify your yard, and when you enjoy fishing or picnicking on the seawall, leave it cleaner than you found it, and the list can go on and on.

The bottom line is that everyone needs to be aware of the problem of litter and to become part of the solution. Won't you please help!

What a contrast in temperatures to return to at home!

On Thursday I was reaching out and touching an ice glacier with a temperature of 46 degrees and a chill factor of 20 degrees. This was also in a drizzling rain. On Friday afternoon, I returned home to a 90-plus temperature and bright sunshine.

It was a good week away in Alaska, and I will tell you a bit more next week in my column about our journey to our 49th state.

to me. He encouraged me to run for office.

"He was all for Waveland, and its people. Any time he could do anything for the people, he was right there to do it. He was just a nice guy."

Longo was a member of American Legion Post 77, the Waveland Civic Association, the Italian Society of the Immaculate Conception and St. Clare Catholic Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Motie Jean Longo of Waveland; three sons, John Thomas Longo and Steven Michael Longo, both of Waveland, and Theodore John Longo of Gulfport; three daughters, Motie Gail Longo Trahan of Pascagoula, Deborah Marie Longo Worrell of Biloxi and Christine Elizabeth Longo of Houston, Tex. and eight grandchildren.

Former Waveland Police Chief Donald Dorn said of his 27-year association with Longo, "He was a fine man, and a good person to work for."

"He did a lot for the growth of the city; I remember when the sales tax collections were a few hundred dollars a month. He was there when the shopping centers were built."

Bay St. Louis Mayor Eddie Favre said, "I worked with Johnny on the Wastewater Authority and in other capacities since 1980. It is a tremendous loss for the city and for Hancock County. Those kind of people don't come along too often."

death.

When I was a Bay St. Louis councilman, the council, by law, had to balance the city's budget. When I was a state senator, by constitutional amendment, we had to balance the state's budget.

And it did keep the cities and state from spending more money than they collected. We need to live by that rule in Washington.

Our nation has been on a spending spree since the 1960's and it has gotten progressively worse. For example, during the last decade, President Reagan never submitted a budget within $100 billion of being balanced, nor did Congress ever pass a budget within $100 billion of being balanced.

This year, President Bush submitted a budget that is $400 billion in the red and it looks like the Congress will pass a budget that is $400 billion in the red. This must change. Congress and the President have to take a shared responsibility. When the President does his part by submitting a balanced budget to Congress, Congress ought to do its part by passing the President's proposal.

Obviously, that is a best case scenario. However, we must strive toward the goal of balancing our nation's budget. It has become too easy to spend money we don't have and if we remain on our current course, the deficit will continue to threaten our nation's security.

Bayou Town in the Pass

Pass Christian Library director Kay Covode and children's librarian Sally James estimated 190 children attended Wednesday's puppet theatre, "Bayou Town," featuring Cherie Schadler, in background. The presentation was part of the library's summer reading program, which continues next week with T-shirt painting. Covode said more than 500 children's books were checked out the previous day, a record for the library. For additional information, call 452-4595. (Photo by Janet McQueen)

'Spout About Books' sponsors T-shirt painting at three libraries

T-shirt painting will be the highlight for this week's activities during the Hancock Library System's summer reading program, "Spout About Books." No registration is required for these programs.

Participants in the program at the Kiln Library will meet

Tuesday, June 23, at 1:30 p.m., while those at the City-County Library will meet Wednesday, June 24, and the Waveland Library Thursday, June 25, at 10 a.m. both days.

Those attending are urged to bring their own clean white t-shirt to be painted.

This year's program features two segments — the reading incentive segment and the summer activities segment. The reading incentive segment is open to all children and young adults, from pre-school to eighth grade. Children who have not yet learned to read may participate by having a parent read to them.

A DIFFERENT VIEW

By Traci Bonney

In some of our local advertising shoppers, there's an ad that starts off "Rent a husband." The first time I saw that, I gaped, then giggled when I realized it was for a house/yardwork service.

Of course, my imagination brainstormed for a while the idea of people being able to actually rent family members, but I had no idea folks really do that sort of thing.

Until now. Not too long ago, I read an Associated Press article about a company in Japan whose entire purpose is to offer parents or children for rent. Before you go all the way through the roof, let me tell you that these parents and children are actually actors who are paid to pretend to be someone's family.

The company, Japan Efficiency Headquarters, offers the services of its actors — who the company calls "entertainers" — at a price of 150,000 yen, or $1,150, for three hours.

Most of the 80 households that have rented families from this company have been adult children too busy to visit their parents, although some of the clients have been parents who miss having contact with their children. A few of the clients have been adult children who want to visit with parents.

I have to be honest; this blows my mind. I know the Japanese have been pushing themselves beyond all normal limits for decades now, trying to increase productivity and efficiency, but this is too much!

I don't know how many times over the years I've heard that the Japanese and Chinese revere their elders much more than we do. So tell me, what's so reverent about a son who is a 10-minute car ride away from his 60-year-old parents, who chooses to spend $1,150 for a fake family to visit Mom and Dad instead of taking a little time after work to see them himself?

I live three hours away from my parents, but I probably see them more times in a year than that son does.

I hope this rent-a-family idea doesn't catch on here in the States; we already have a big enough communication gap in some families without some money-hungry entrepreneur helping to widen the chasm.

Besides, if I had $1,150 to spare, I think I'd take a long weekend to visit with Mom and Dad, and find some other way to spend the money — maybe on them, even.

But for those of you who like this idea, think what it could be like.

Tom has to work late at the office, but he promised to take Susan out to dinner. So, what does he do? He calls up the local Rent-A-Family, and asks them to send a husband to his home address.

The rental husband shows up, dressed for dinner at a nice restaurant. Susan looks at him and rolls her eyes. "What, another one? Tom didn't even let me know he couldn't make it tonight! That, that... Oh well," she sighs, "let's go."

Susan and the rental husband hit it off very well and have a wonderful dinner together. Afterward, they go dancing and take in a late movie.

When Tom gets home, he finds a strange woman in the house. "Who are you?"

She smiles and hands him a note. "Dear Tom," it reads, "Thanks for the anniversary present. Here's mine to you. See you in court. Susan." Or another scenario:

Mom and Dad look at the kitchen clock again. It's 10 p.m., and Johnny is long overdue for his weekend home from college.

Just as Mom decides they need to call the police, there's a knock at the door. They open the door to find a stranger standing there.

"Hi, Mom. Hi, Dad. I'm your son for the weekend. Johnny rented me 'cause he has a huge exam next week and decided to stay at school and study."

They welcome him into their home; this isn't the first time Johnny has skipped out on a weekend at home. The family has a great time with their new son, and Johnny gets a letter at school the next week.

"Dear Johnny, Thanks for sending a substitute son. We liked him so much, we've decided to keep him. You'll have to move out this summer and support yourself from now on. Mom and Dad."

Okay, so maybe my brain slipped into the Twilight Zone again (this column seems to have that effect on it). I seriously doubt most people would trade their real family for the rental versions.

However, my point is this: If money can't buy happiness, why should it be able to buy a family?

I don't know about y'all, but I cherish my family. I enjoy being with them, and I certainly wouldn't want to lose that privilege to a bunch of "entertainers."

Satellite programming center established

The University of Southern Mississippi has established the Gulf Coast's first central facility for satellite-delivered programming reception between New Orleans and Mobile, Ala.

LIVE THE LEGEND!

Model: Siberian citizen Vladimir Kovalenko

On December 8, 1991 the Soviet republics of Russia, the Ukraine and Byelorussia signed an accord creating the Commonwealth of Independent States. The document's first paragraph said, in part, "That the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, as a subject of international law and geopolitical reality, is ceasing its existence."

During the following year, most other Soviet republics would sign the accord and millions of people would be unshackled from the communist system.

The world would never be the same again.

Meanwhile, in Hancock County...

The issue of Dockside Gambling remained unsettled after being approved in a close vote in December, 1990.

Gambling's opponents and proponents battled over regulations, sites and number of casinos.

The county's first license was issued to Bay Cove Marina (Casino Magic Corporation), which is scheduled to open Labor Day, 1992.

The Mississippi Army National Guard 1355th Supply and Service Company of Bay St. Louis and Ocean Springs participated in Operation Desert Shield/Storm and returned home to a hero's welcome.

Drying flowers adds to enjoyment time

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

How often have you wished that a flower would keep its beauty for months or years? Unfortunately, most fresh, cut flowers are short lived.

Even on the plant, a single daylily or hibiscus blossom lasts only one day. A squash blossom lasts for only a few hours. An orchid may last a couple of weeks, but it eventually discolors and loses its beauty.

Not all flowers are equally perishable. A group of flowers known as everlasting flowers have papery parts that are easily dried and retain their form and color.

The name strawflower is used for several kinds with everlasting heads, but usually for helichrysum with its brightly colored bracts of red, orange, yellow, pink, purple or white.

Another popular bedding plant in the everlasting group is globe amaranth (Gomphrena). This annual plant has clover-like heads in white, red, rose, purple, lavender and orange. The dried flower heads, like those of helichrysum, last for years.

Honesty, also called money plant, has already bloomed this spring. The purple or white flowers have developed into green, silver dollar-sized seed pods that will soon dry and turn white.

When the whole plant is cut and dried, the two outer layers of the seed pods and seeds can be separated from the silvery middle portion.

The harvested seeds can be immediately replanted in the garden where they will grow into plants that will over-winter and repeat the cycle next spring.

Statice is a popular everlasting flower. Blue statice is widely used in fresh and dried bouquets. The papery flowers also come in white, yellow, and shades of pink and rose. The display the individual flowers in moisture-proof containers.

Moisture is the worst enemy of dried flowers. Some of the acrylic type sprays available at craft shops can be sprayed on dried flowers to provide protec-flowers on the annual types of statice are more colorful than those on the perennial, but the perennial types are also worth growing.

Most delicate flowers don't hold their shape well, and it's really only the flat-faced flowers such as pansies that look good after pressing and drying between the pages of a thick book.

Whether it's a single, fresh flower as a reminder of a special day or event of just flowers from your garden that you'd like to keep, it is possible to preserve them in an attractive form.

Individual flowers can be dried in silica-gel, a finely granulated drying compound available in most craft stores. Follow the directions on the package for drying flowers.

Silica-gel used with your microwave oven can speed up the drying process. Each type of flower has its own heating time ranging from one to six minutes at the low or medium oven setting followed by about four hours of cooling and drying time.

Once dried and cleaned of any adhering silica-gel, store or

Composting

The way to a better garden

What is composting? Composting produces a better garden by recycling organic wastes such as leaves, grass clippings, fruit and vegetable scraps, and other organic wastes by combining them in an open pile or container so that they decompose through microbial action into humus.

Garden and yard waste mixed with kitchen scraps will produce material which can enrich garden soil and fertilize plants.

Now is the time to begin thinking of vegetable and flower gardens and to prepare a compost pile. By using compost you return organic matter to the soil in a usable form.

Organic material in the soil improves plant growth by loosening heavy clay soils, which allows better root penetration; by improving the capacity to hold water and nutrients in sandy soils; and by adding essential nutrients to any soil.

Other organic materials such as straw, coffee grounds, egg shells, sawdust, and small twigs can also be composted. To make a nitrogen-rich pile use materials such as alfalfa, clover, grass trimmings and fresh plant clippings.

If these materials are not available, a cup of high nitrogen garden fertilizer per cubic yard of compost, does the trick. Water provides the needed moisture for efficient decay. The compost pile should be kept damp but not soggy.

Do not use meat, bones, grease, fat, oils, paper, whole branches or logs, dairy products, plastics, synthetic fibers, human or pet wastes, or diseased plants. These materials can slow or stop the composting process and attract rodents and insects.

For more information on how to get started composting, call the Answerline at 1-800-222-8311; or write or visit the Mississippi Department of Economic and Community Development, Energy and Transportation Division, 510 George Street, Suite 101, Jackson, Mississippi 39202-3096, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Left alone, plants may die

When plants are left home alone, they may not get the food and water they need. A couple of days might not make a big difference.

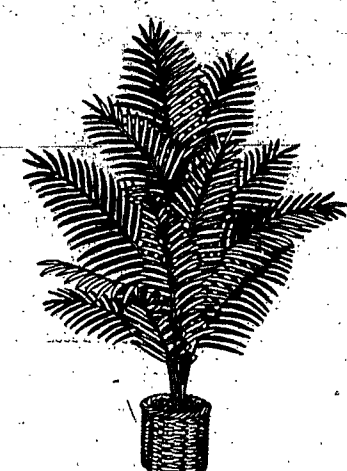

A couple of weeks will. Vacationers who want to come back to green houseplants do best by leaving someone else in charge. That way, they can make sure plants will get what they need to stay fresh and healthy.

"Plants, like animals, require basic care on a regular basis," said Dr. David Tatum, extension ornamentals specialist at Mississippi State University. "How much food and water they need depends upon the environment inside the house."

Many houseplants, when left alone, suffer not so much from the amount of light they receive but from the intensity (heat) of it. When it gets too hot, plants can't pick themselves up and move to a cooler spot.

More often than not, the plant sitter can make the houseplant more comfortable by putting it in another location or cut down the light's intensity by pulling curtains, shades and blinds. When the plant needs warmer temperatures, the plant sitter can let the light shine through by pulling back the shade.

"Light that comes from a southern or eastern exposure is much hotter than that which comes from a northern or eastern one," Tatum said. "Drawing a sheer curtain can reduce the light intensity, which in turn also reduces the plant's water requirements."

However, there are short-term measures houseplant owners can take if a sitter can't be found:

—Put some small rocks in a saucer and pour water to the top of the rocks. Set the plant on top of the rocks. The water will slowly evaporate, keeping the plant cool.

—Insert a cotton wick into the drain hole of a potted plant, making sure the wick goes into the soil. Put the other end of the wick in a container of water under the plant. The wick, operating on the principle of water movement from high points of concentration to low points, will draw the water up to the plant.

"Indoor plants can be left alone for a few days without much harm done," Tatum said. "But if the plant lover is gone for an extended period of time, hiring a plant sitter or having a good neighbor is a worthy investment."

H.A.P.P.Y. FATHER'S DAY

HONOR YOUR FATHER FOR ALL THE ROLES HE HAD TO PLAY

A father must play many parts, like mending childhood's broken hearts And teaching you to throw those darts, when he made time to play.

He was, as memories revealed, provider, counselor and shield;

With his anxiety concealed, in case you'd gone astray.

He wanted you to do what's right and always keep your goals in sight,

Then making sure you'd see the light, he taught you to obey

The lessons of your chosen creed, and follow them in word and deed

So when in your life you did succeed, your father showed the way.
